YOLO: A GAME

The memory game YOLO (You only live once) enhances health, safety and well-being of youngsters during the turbulent phase of life on the eve of adolescence: puberty.

YOLO is a tool for teachers to provide comprehensive sexual and reproductive health education in an open-minded and joyful atmosphere, leading to a respectful handling of each other's values and standards. It encourages students to take responsibility for themselves, their partners and the next generation.

The illustrations give rise to questions, discussion and informative talks about physical, psychological, emotional and social items during puberty. The game can be used in lessons Biology and Social Studies or Human Rights.

Starting folic acid weeks before conception instead of in early pregnancy:

Creating awareness that the use of extra folic acid to prevent neural tube defects and cleft lips and palate is of no use after the first six weeks of pregnancy and should be started more than four weeks before conception. Folic acid should be placed on another shelf in the drugstore and attention should be asked for complementary preconception care and measures.
